SHADOWS

On the days when Mother Nature deems us worthy of warmth, the sun becomes our favorite playtime companion. While everything the light touches casts a shadow we found our shadow playtime a little distorting. Our Hyenas take risks and are not afraid to get creative. In no time, bunnies and dogs were racing all over the playground. Puppet friends soared to great heights as they reached for layups. The greatest feat was a fire-breathing dragon complete with a forked tongue and a spiny tail. Our Hyenas know how to have fun in the sun. What other weather marvels will we discover next?
The time has come to put our money where our minds are. This week the Hyenas decided to get even more creative with Unifix cubes. While it could have ended with the occasional spinner and a model of your favorite cube, our Hyenas decided to get creative. The result was a squad of ninjas complete with apposable arms and a slew of attachments. From claws that can hook onto zip lines to an octopus ship that traveled through time and space. There was no shortage of marvelous structures.
GONE GOLFING

The next PGA championship will be held in the Hyenas. While the great game of golf is usually reserved for legends like Tiger Woods, our Hyenas wanted to get in on the action. This version of the game is played with cards and seats four players. Golf is a game of memory and math. The objective is to be the player with the lowest score. With friends by your side there's no telling what kind of sillies will be released. With such contentious games like we’ve had there's no way we won’t produce the next golfing champion.

DONATION ALERT!!

The Hyenas are starting a new art project that involves using magazines. If you have any old or unwanted magazines the Hyenas could use, we would be most appreciative. The magazines pages will be cut into stripes, so pictures are not that important, more so colors and designs. Expect a HYENA ART SHOWCASE this coming spring.
